It also provides a trail for film enthusiasts to explore iconic movie locations. The map of Dingle Town features street names, landmarks, parking, and one-way traffic systems. Additional details on civic buildings, churches, and local services are also included. For more detailed maps, the Discovery Series Maps by Ordnance Survey Ireland can be used, covering various sections of the peninsula. The Dingle Peninsula Craft and Gift Trail map guides visitors to studios, producers, and retailers showcasing local crafts and art. Three driving routes are featured on this map: Sleah Head & Brandon Creek, The Slieve Mish Drive, and Conor Pass & Dingle Peninsula's Gold Coast Drive. A guide brochure is available for download or purchase, offering tips on visiting the peninsula safely during the pandemic. The area boasts stunning natural beauty, with the Atlantic Ocean stretching 30 miles along Ireland's Wild Atlantic Way. The Dingle Peninsula offers a unique blend of rugged landscapes and charming villages, making it an ideal destination for those seeking a rich cultural experience. The peninsula's majestic coastline boasts steep sea-cliffs, dramatic headlands, and picturesque sandy beaches, with the award-winning Inch Beach being a must-visit attraction. Immerse yourself in the local culture by engaging with the community through traditional Irish music sessions, Gaelic football matches, or simply striking up conversations with the locals. The area is also rich in history, featuring historic sites, stunning viewpoints, and ancient monuments to explore. With its diverse villages, ranging from fishing communities to market towns, the Dingle Peninsula offers a wealth of experiences for visitors. Take a stroll along the coast, visit local craft distilleries and breweries, or indulge in the region's renowned cuisine. Whether you're interested in history, nature, or simply soaking up the atmosphere, the Dingle Peninsula has something to offer. Given article text here Inch Beach, situated on a sand spit in Dingle Bay, offers a serene spot to unwind with its Blue Flag status and high European standards for bathing water quality. During the summer months, visitors can enjoy lifeguards and plenty of swimmers, surfers, and beachgoers. The Minard Castle, perched atop Kilmurry Bay, is another highlight, boasting an ancient fortress built by the Fitzgerald clan. Despite being in a state of ruin, it once served as a formidable stronghold with four stories and vaulted ceilings. After exploring the castle's ruins, visitors can head to Dingle town, known for its colorful buildings, bustling harbor, and lively pubs. The seafood is also a major draw, with popular spots like Out of the Blue Seafood and The Fish Box offering an unforgettable dining experience. The next stop on the Dingle Peninsula Drive is the Sleah Head Drive, featuring breathtaking landscapes of cliffs, secluded beaches, and ancient ruins. As you continue along the winding road, each bend reveals a new vista that will leave visitors in awe of the peninsula's beauty. A short 10-minute drive from Dingle town lies Ventry Bay Beach, boasting the largest expanse of golden sand and pristine water quality. Recognized with the Blue Flag award, it's perfect for swimming, paddleboarding, and relaxing. The Dunbeg Fort, perched on the cliffs overlooking the Atlantic Ocean, offers a glimpse into Ireland's past as an ancient stone fortress built during the Iron Age. Visitors can wander through the remains of the fort and appreciate its stone walls. The Dingle Peninsula offers a unique glimpse into Ireland's ancient past through its beehive huts, which are crafted using the ancient drystone corbelling method. These structures date back to the Neolithic period and are characteristic of the area's rich Celtic tradition. The peninsula is also home to numerous stunning viewpoints, including Ceann Sleibhe (Sleah Head), which offers breathtaking views of ancient forts, beaches, historic churches, and the Blasket Islands. The drive along Sleah Head takes you past a stone cross marking the westernmost point of Europe before America, serving as a poignant reminder of the area's maritime history. The scenic Radharc na mBlascaoidí / Blasket's View offers a stunning perspective of the Blasket Islands' dramatic cliffs and rolling hills. Next, visit Coumeenole Beach, which is framed by towering cliffs and dramatic rock formations, providing a perfect spot for a leisurely stroll or relaxing picnic. Continuing your drive, you'll reach Dunmore Head, the westernmost point of mainland Ireland, offering stunning views of the Atlantic Ocean and Blasket Islands. This popular spot attracts hikers and photographers with its rugged cliffs and panoramic vistas. Finally, stop at Dunquin Pier, also known as Dun Chaoin Pier, a historic landmark situated on the edge of the Atlantic Ocean. It offers breathtaking views of the coastline and nearby Blasket Islands, serving as an important historical site in the region. Centuries-old coastal hub providing vital access to islands and serving as lifeline for local community. Panoramic views from Clogher Head reveal Clogher Beach, Sybil Point, Three Sisters, and Mount Brandon. Hike in a westerly direction for vistas of Blasket Sound and iconic Blasket Islands. Next stop on Dingle Peninsula Drive is Gallarus Oratory, an ancient stone structure showcasing early Christian architecture and remarkably preserved corbelled roof. Shape like upturned boat with small western entrance, constructed without mortar. Drive to town of Dingle, then continue to Conor Pass, Ireland's highest mountain pass at 456 meters above sea level. Narrow road spans 12 kilometers with average gradient of 5.6% and vertical ascent of 399 meters. Enjoy stunning views of glaciated landscape, mountains, corrie lakes, and Brandon Bay. Kettle holes are remnants of last ice age. Conor Pass can be challenging due to narrow road, but awe-inspiring views make it a must-visit destination. For best stops on Dingle Peninsula Drive when time is limited, prioritize: Gallarus Oratory for glimpse into Ireland's early Christian heritage; Conor Pass for breathtaking views; Coumeenole Beach for relaxing break and stunning Atlantic Ocean views; Clogher Head for panoramic views. The scenic Dingle Peninsula Drive is a must-visit attraction in Ireland, covering 93km of breathtaking coastline. To make the most of your trip, consider stopping at key viewpoints like Clogher Head, which offers stunning vistas of Clogher Beach and beyond. A visit to Dunquin Pier will give you a glimpse into the area's rich maritime heritage and provide an appreciation for the region's unique charm. For a more immersive experience, take your time exploring the Dingle Peninsula Drive, allowing at least a full day to soak in the sights and sounds of this beautiful part of Ireland. Don't miss our interactive Google Map at the end of this guide, which will help you plan your trip and make the most of your time on the Dingle Peninsula Drive. Whether you're looking for a relaxing drive or an action-packed adventure, this scenic route has something for everyone. Photos via Shutterstock The Dingle Peninsula Drive can be confusing, especially if you're not familiar with the area. To help you plan your trip, we've outlined some key information below: 1. Location: The Dingle Peninsula Drive takes you around the Dingle Peninsula in County Kerry. 2. Starting and ending points: You can start from either the Tralee side or the Killarney side of the peninsula. We recommend starting at Inch Beach and following the coast clockwise. 3. Time required: Allow at least a full day to complete the 93km route, taking your time to soak in the sights and sounds. Below, you'll find our printable map and Google Map with plotted stops, as well as an itinerary to help you make the most of your trip. Click on any of the images below to get inspired and start planning your next adventure to Ireland! The Dingle Peninsula Loop is a treasure trove of natural beauty, rich history, and breathtaking views. The journey begins with surfers attempting to conquer the waves, setting the tone for an unforgettable adventure. A clear day reveals glorious mountain vistas, making for a fantastic start to your trip. Stop 2: Minard Castle - Often overlooked, this picturesque castle is just a short 15-minute drive from Inch. Its stunning views of the water make it a must-visit, especially if you're familiar with the classic film 'Ryan's Daughter'. The castle's unique location on a grassy hill commands breathtaking views on a clear day. Stop 3: Dingle Town - After visiting Minard Castle, head to bustling Dingle Town for a leisurely stroll. This charming town attracts thousands of tourists each summer and boasts an array of attractions, including the Dingle Distillery, Dingle Aquarium, and plenty of excellent restaurants and pubs. Visitors can also join one of the many guided tours available. Stop 4: Ventry Beach - A short drive from Dingle Town, Ventry Beach is a Blue Flag Beach that's perfect for warm days. Stretching 4.5km, this popular beach offers white sand and crystal-clear waters, marking the beginning of the Sleah Head Drive. Take some time to stroll or paddle in its tranquil atmosphere. Stop 5: Beehive Huts, Forts, and Sheepdog Demonstrations - As you leave Ventry Beach, follow the coastal road and discover a range of paid and free attractions. Explore the ancient beehive huts, forts, and watch sheepdogs demonstrate their skills. Stop 6: The Viewpoints - The Sleah Head Drive part of the loop is a highlight for many, but don't miss the stunning viewpoints along the way. Be sure to take your time and study the map above to ensure you catch these hidden gems. Ceann Sleibhe and the White Cross are two notable stops with breathtaking views. Stop 7: Radharc na mBlascaoidí Viewpoint - The final viewpoint on this list, Radharc na mBlascaoidí offers a truly unforgettable experience. Take in the stunning vistas and appreciate the natural beauty of the Dingle Peninsula Loop. The Dingle Peninsula offers a wealth of scenic views and attractions. One standout stop is Dunmore Head, where parking allows for a grand view and wild weather brings a thrilling display of waves against the rugged cliffs. Next, visitors can enjoy Coumeenole Beach, known as a filming location for 'Ryan's Daughter,' but warned to keep feet dry due to strong currents. A short walk down to the beach is accessible from a nearby parking spot. The pier at Dun Chaoin marks the departure point for the Blasket Island Ferry and comes with two warnings: the cliff edge is unguarded, and driving down its bendy road can be hazardous. The Dingle Peninsula offers two options for accessing its visitor centre: you can pay to enter through the main entrance or, if you're nearby, explore it via a public path. Gallarus Oratory, built around the 11th-12th centuries, stands at just 4.8m by 3m in size, making it a compact structure. To continue your journey, head back into Dingle Town and then up to Conor Pass (a 20-minute drive), one of Ireland's highest mountain passes that can be intimidating for nervous drivers. However, you don't have to navigate the pass itself if you're not comfortable. If you start from the Dingle side, you'll reach a car park before hitting the narrow road. From here, take in the breathtaking views of the surrounding valley and watch cars tackle its winding bends. Next, follow the road from Conor Pass to arrive at the Maharees - a 5km-long tombolo bordered by the bays of Brandon and Tralee. This area is home to some of Kerry's most stunning beaches, including Fermoyle Beach and Castlegregory. Take some time to stretch your legs on these scenic spots. As you leave Castlegregory, continue along the coast until reaching the village of Camp (less than 15 minutes away). From there, take a detour right up towards the Caherconree Scenic Route - a drive often overlooked in Dingle Peninsula guides. Be cautious as this route is narrow and can be intimidating for some drivers, but those who brave it will be rewarded with awe-inspiring views that many visitors miss. The Dingle Peninsula offers a unique blend of natural beauty, rich culture, and ancient history, making it one of Europe's most breathtakingly scenic regions. With its dramatic landscapes, this region is a must-visit destination for anyone looking to experience the very best of Ireland. The Dingle Peninsula attracts hundreds of thousands of visitors each year due to its rich history and breathtaking landscapes. The trip can be made in a 70-minute drive from Killarney or a 1-hour and 45-minute drive from Kenmare, depending on the starting location. Getting to the peninsula is relatively easy, with various options available: - Driving: A straightforward and simple route. - Train + Bus: Accessible via nearby train stations in Tralee, Killarney, and Farranfore, followed by a bus ride to Dingle. - Tour from Killarney: A day-trip option that takes you directly to Dingle. The Dingle Peninsula boasts numerous archaeological sites, including ancient stone forts like Caherpoll and castles like Minard. This region is part of the Gaeltacht area where Irish language and culture are still prevalent today. Visitors can enjoy traditional music and festivals throughout the year. The peninsula is divided into different areas, each with its pros and cons: - Staying in Dingle Town for a lively atmosphere. - Annascaull, the hometown of Tom Crean, for a quieter experience and exploring history. - Sleah Head for stunning scenery and natural beauty. To explore the peninsula, there are two notable drives: The Sleah Head Drive and The Dingle Peninsula Loop. Minard Castle sits atop a hill, offering stunning views of the surrounding mountains. Nearby, Sleah Head provides breathtaking vistas of the rugged coastline. At Conor Pass, the highest point in Ireland, visitors can enjoy panoramic views of sweeping valleys. The Maharees boasts an impressive 5km-long tombolo with pristine beaches. For those seeking adventure, the Caherconree Scenic Route offers a scenic and narrow drive that is often overlooked. Once you've explored the Dingle Peninsula, consider venturing further into Kerry to discover its many hidden gems, including Killarney and other destinations along the Ring of Kerry.
