Correct answer: No one can say for sure why there is an imbalance between male and female births. One theory is that the skewed birth ratio is nature’s way of ensuring an even balance of males to females in adulthood. Males are more likely than females to die at all stages of life, but especially in infancy. Boys are bigger risks. They are more likely to die from accidents, suicides and diseases. Social reasons also influence gender imbalance. In some countries of Asia and the Middle East, there is a strong preference for having sons rather than daughters. Females are often aborted in the womb, resulting in a higher birth ratio of boys. Is in the chromosomes The sex of the child is determined by the chromosomes of the father. When sperm carries an X chromosome, it combines with the mother’s X chromosome to make a baby girl. If sperm carries a Y chromosome, it makes a baby. There are many factors that can affect whether the X or Y chromosome sperm joins with the egg, including nutrition, environment and timing. None of these is shown to have any significant effect. In the end, it comes down to chance. Determining Factors There are a lot of rumors about things that can increase the chances of having a boy or a girl. But professionals agree that there is no scientific way for a parent to control the gender of their unborn child. However, studies have shown that a man’s family tree can suggest whether or not he will have boys or girls. A 2008 Newcastle University study found that a man with more siblings is likely to have more male children. A man with more sisters probably has daughters. While there are more boys born than girls, by the time these children reach adulthood the ratio drops to about 105 boys to 100 girls. All over the world the numbers are close to even. But in countries like China and India, there is still an imbalance due to a strong preference for males at birth. In 2018, the Washington Post reported that there are 70 million more men than women in these countries. Richard Wright’s “Black Boy” was first released in 1945. This autobiographical novel was a bestseller, and is an important work of literature of the twentieth century. Another famous novel by Richard Wright, “Native Son”, was published in 1940. Here are some quotes from “Black Boy.” “The faint fresh kiss of sensuality when dew came on my cheeks and shins as I ran down the green wet garden paths in the morning.” “Now I’m hungry, but I won’t live with you.” “I’m doing everything I can.” “When you pass, kiss back there.” “White, red and black”, but quickly tells him to hug, saying, “They’ll call you a colored man when you grow up. Would you mind, Mr. Wright? “You can’t eat a dead dog, can you?” “If you kiss my elbow, I’d turn into a girl.” “At the age of twelve, before I had a full year of formal schooling, I had a conception of life that no experience would ever have had a predilection for the rest that no argument could ever contradict, a sense of the world that was mine and my alone, a idea of what the life would have been meaning that no education could ever alter, the conviction that the meaning of life came only when He fought to tear a sense of meaningless suffering. ” “ I said, that boy doesn’t know what he does ... ” “The naked will of power always seemed to walk in the wake of an inn “You should know God through a church.” “Even if it’s not right, it’s not so wrong.” “I’ve never seen a dog bite that could really hurt ...” A “ “The principal’s speech is the best speech.” “My ass is hard and the coins are scarce.” “This was the culture I jumped. Most children are afraid of haircuts. From sharp scissors to see their hair fall to the ground, getting a haircut is not on their lists of favorite things to do. Unless it’s Morgan, a kid from the United Kingdom, who not only requested a haircut, but also had a very specific one in mind. After becoming attached to the haircut of his older neighbor, Trevor, had, Morgan insisted on cutting his mane to match. So the baby asked his Uncle Sean to do the honors. So Sean did what any loving uncle would do; he practiced the scissors and the razor and gave the baby what he wanted. When Sean was made, he posted photos of his nephew’s new “do” on Facebook, the pictures were shared more than 9,000 times.
