By default, Flutter creates a debug version of your app. When you are ready to prepare a release version of your app, for example to publish at the Google Play Store, this page can help. Before publishing, you may want to put some finishing touches on your app. This page covers the following topics: Note: On this page, [Project] refers to the directory where the application is located. While following these instructions, replace [Project] with the app directory. Adding a boot icon When a new flutter app is created, has a default start icon. To customize this icon, you may want to check the flutter_launcher_icons package. Alternatively, you can manually do this by using the following steps: review the guidelines for material design product icons for icon design. In [Project] / Android / App / SRC / Main / Res / List, place icons files in folders named using configuration qualifiers. Default MIPMAP folders demonstrate the correct denomination convention. In AndroidManifest.xml, update the Android application tag: icon attribute to the reference icons from the previous step (for example,
