You get 3 years of regular warranty against hardware failure, 2 years of free level 1 data recovery (meaning that no advanced recovery method is required) and an early replacement year, where if the drive is defective, Glyph will send the replacement immediately before You have to send the defective drive back. More importantly, in the tests, the Blackbox Plus came out much better than the G-Drive. I tested the hard drive-based version of 1 TB through USB 3.1 connection, using a USB-C cable with a USB-C computer and it got a sustained real word copy speed of 150MB/s to write and 160MB/S for reading, among the highest for a portable drive of this type. The BlackBox is powered by bus, you won't need a separate power adapter and also works with USB 3.0 and USB 2.0. The BlackBox Plus includes virtually all USB cables you would need: two USB cables, a USB-A cable for USB-C and a USB-C cable for USB-C for computers with USB-C or Thunderbolt 3. The G-Tech Mobile Drive, on the other hand, is available in a single capacity based on 1 TB hard drive for $120. In addition to the rugged aluminium casing, the Blackbox Plus features a removable protective rubber case to save it from accidental drops. In addition, Blackbox Plus includes an interesting 3-2-1 warranty policy. [Download product manuals for all our current and legacy products] Download product manuals for all our current and inherited products, follow us for the upcoming events, product gifts, special offers and to see Glyph units in action. Similar to G-Drive, it does not support encryption to protect data against loss or theft, nor does it include any backup software. First of all, it supports USB 3.1 Gen 2 (10 Gbps) as opposed to G-Drive Gen 1 (5 Gbps) support.
