Some basketball players have their shirt in every good sports store on the planet, while others are not so lucky. They can have a brilliant moment. But it's not enough to go down into history. These players had short-lived fame in the NBA and then continued to do different things. Some have stayed with the sports that work as a coach, and some have continued to completely different living areas. These players were once the bright stars, however, and deserve the merit of what they gave to sports. Arizona Native Mike Bibby began his NBA career with the Crizzy Vancouver before he went to play for the Sacramento Kings. It was an important factor in the kings becoming contenders of the Western Conference. courtesy photo: Keith Allison / Wikipedia
From his time in the NBA,It has become the coach leader for Shadow Mountain High School. Under the guidance of him, the school team won the title of the state four times. He put a serious effort in the gym even in the weight lifting department and now captures a team in the Big3 3-on-3 3-on-3 The league called the Ghost Ballers. While playing for the Detroit Pistons, Ben Wallace became a first-rate defensive player. Its smaller size did not make any difference in its ability to defend the circle. He won the Defensive Player of the Year award four times and was instrumental in the Pistons defeating the Lakers in the 2003-04 NBA Finals. Photo courtesy: Jauerback/Wikipedia
When he retired from basketball, he admitted to being depressed. He has been arrested twice (once for a DWI and once for leaving the scene of an accident) but has turned his life around and is now the owner and president of the Piston G-League team. At 6 feet 11 inches, Mehmet Okur preferred to spread the floor, and was good when he did, because he had a 37.5 percent average shot from outside the three-point line. Photo courtesy: Doug Pensinger/Getty Images
Since his time as a player, Okur has worked as an ambassador for Utah Jazz for two seasons. He was then hired as assistant coach for the Phoenix Suns, but was fired after his first season. Now she's stopped her basketball life completely and lives with her family in San Diego. Hedo Turkoglu, the first Turkish basketball player in the NBA, became one of the league's top bankers when he played for the Sacramento Kings. Then he went to Orlando and had career highs in points per game (17.5), rebounds per game (6.4) and assists per game (5.5). Photo courtesy: Keith Allison/Wikipedia
Now he has returned to work in his home country for Turkish President Recep Tayyip ErdoAan (since 2016). He has also been in a dispute with Enes Kanter, a current NBA player, because Kanter supports a political leader who is competing with ErdoAan. Isaiah Rider Jr. won the 1994 Dunk Contest, and his natural talent made it look like he would go far in the NBA. As a great player as he was, however, his substance abuse led to a seven-month prison sentence. He is now a coach of Phoenix Hillcrest Prep. Photo Courtesy: Unknown/Twitter
The founder of the school's basketball program, Nick Weaver, said: "Isaia will bring a wealth of knowledge to the program and will be a great mentor to all children. He will add a new dimension to the program having been a long-time NBA player who has had a lot of success." One of the best players of the 90s, Shawn Kemp was similar to Zion Williamson in athletic skills and physicality. He didn't get his name advertised as Charles Barkley or Karl Malone, but he was still one of the most talented players in the game. Photo Courtesy: Rocky Widner/Getty Images
However, outside the courtroom, Kemp has been arrested many times for drug possession. After trying to play in Italy, he withdrew from the game and now owns a nightclub and lounge in the Seattle area. Your son, Kemp Jr., played at the University of Washington. Put World Peace (ex Ron Artest) was a great athlete. He went from being a stellar scorer to a great defensive player, ignoring Malice al al al Accident, he had a great career. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison/Wikipedia
Since his basketball career, he has appeared on reality shows such as Big Brother, Figure It Out, Dancing With The Stars and Key and Peele. His son, Ron Artest III, played for Cal-State Northridge. The Artest Management Group is his company and helps athletes build their brand. Recently he has also become a mental health advocate. Underrated as the best scorer, Alex English has scored more than twenty-one points per game and has also been an All-Star eight times. As a three-time member of the second NBA team, he led them through the 1983 season. Photo Courtesy: U.S. Embassy in Uruguay/Wikipedia
Since retiring from basketball, English has had many acting roles. In 1996, he played the coach of the Cleveland Cavaliers in the movie Eddie. English has also created and hosted basketball courts for disadvantaged children in many different countries. Now he works for the SEC Network as a basketball analyst. Second only to LeBron James, Yao Ming had a lot of hype around his NBA entry. At 7 feet and 6 inches tall, he became an All-Star eight of his ten seasons. He proved once and for all that Asian-Americans can play sports just like anyone else. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison/Wikipedia was inducted into the Naismith Memorial Basketball Hall of Fame in 2016 and was elected President of the Chinese Basketball Association. He also participates in charities for the Special Olympics, for the conservation of endangered species and more. Antoine Walker, a native of Chicago, had the talent and ability to score anywhere on the field. He also made three All-Star teams. However, he had money management problems and wasted all the $108 million he earned playing ball. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison/Wikipedia
However, as of 2013, he has no debts. He worked for Morgan Stanley for four years to educate athletes (both college and professional) on how to manage their money. He has also made several television appearances on sports television programs and radio networks as an analyst. One of the best players in the entire Cleveland Cavaliers series was Mark Price. Of his four seasons as an All-Star, his best was in 1993. His stats led him to become an All-NBA First Team selection. Photo Courtesy: Ubcwvwong/Wikipedia
Since he left the field, Price has been a coach at all levels of the sport, including a high school in Minnesota and Australia. He was then a shooting consultant for several NBA teams before becoming coach of the Charlotte 49ers, but that lasted only two years. Originally from Kentucky, Chapman was adored by fans in his hometown at the University of Kentucky. He then continued a 13-year career in the NBA. Later, he worked for several NBA teams as a member of the office. Photo Courtesy: The Sporting News/Getty Images
However, his life fell when he was arrested for stealing about $14,000 of products from a companyshop. He was captured after selling the items in a pawn shop. He later rehabilitated for a painkiller addiction. Now it is clean and help young adults with the same problems. Known as 'White Chocolate', Jason Williams has consistently given a crazy show despite his small size. He was known to be a magician with basketball and had more than a stellar pass skill. Complimentary photo: Keith Allison/Wikipedia
He kept playing basketball until he suffered a knee injury. He lives in Miami today and is growing proudly his son Jason. The child already shows the promise: A video of him wandering around the defenders became viral. Football fans can expect great things from Jason in the future. After playing both the Charlotte Hornets and the New York Knicks for a total of 10 years, Larry Johnson was really gifted when he came to bounce. He made space on the court and had an inexhaustible energy that not many players could match. Complimentary photo: Bryan Horowitz/Wikipedia
After his retirement, James Dolan, the owner of the Knicks, hired Johnson as a representative of commercial operations. It was a nice thing to do for a player who had done so much for the team, but maybe Dolan will retire and join the team again. One of the best leftovers of the league was Vin Baker 6 feet. Most of his career was spent playing both the Milwaukee Bucks and the Seattle SuperSonics. He was a four-time All-Star, but despite his talent on the court, he wasn't good with money management. Photo Courtesy: Rocky Widner/Getty Images
Wasted about $100 million and had a problem of alcohol abuse. However, he managed to kick his drinking habits in 2011, and after being demolished at a job in Starbucks, he became a television analyst for the Bucks. In 2018, he obtained a job as an assistant coach for the team. While he was teasing for his weight, Oliver Miller was still a big basketball player. However, after his basketball career, he was accused of assault both first and second on an alteration to a barbecue in 2011. Complimentary photo: @SKORNorth/Twitter
His sentence was five years in prison, although he only ended up serving one. Once released, he moved to Arizona to sell cars. She also worked to finally get better in shape and lost 60 pounds so far. As a top-10 fringe player, Penny Hardaway was on track to be a big NBA player. However, after being hit by wounds, he was unable to recover completely. His game never recovered completely, and his career as a player was unfortunately over. Complimentary photo: Matthew Johnson/Wikipedia Hardaway has some activity in hisMemphis' birthplace. He was also recently hired in 2018 by his alma mater to run their basketball program. He has already proven himself to be an excellent recruiter for the team. Andrew Bynum's career was going well. He helped Los Angeles win two championships in his eight seasons as a player and even made the All-Star team. However, his career was cut short of injuries in 2014. has not been under the eyes of the public for a long time, except when it was presented to Game 4 of the NBA Finals 2016. However, Af i also brought to the gym on social media to show its capacities , perhaps in the hope of playing again. Elected number four in the NBA 2001 draft, Windy City native eddy curry was welcomed with open arms from the basketball fans in Chicago. However, his career was interrupted after an irregular heartbeat had removed the place in the team. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison / Wikipedia
he then played for some other team in the NBA before moving to Asia. He now plays with Donte Greene, Josh Powell, Stephen Jackson and C.J. Watson in a Big3 team called Killer 3s. He also father of seven children. When Kwame Brown was chosen in the first place at high school, he had already the approval of Michael Jordan, and people had great expectations about him. However, it lacked the ability to score and capacity to defend the circle. Photo Courtesy: Keith Creative ailslavodvy / Wikipedia
Although his career in the NBA was a failure, he played in the Big3 League since he was chosen fifth absolute in the inaugural season of the championship. He is one of the most in the form of the championship and is praised to attack with the sport he loves to play. Delonte West was a leading college player along with Jameer Nelson and ready to have a great NBA career. He played with the Boston Celtics, the Cleveland Cavaliers and other teams before finishing in China. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison / Wikipedia
Life of him is sadly worsened by there. It was diagnosed with a bipolar disorder, it was seen by a fan that wandered for parking wearing Nientá € other than a hospital dress. It was also arrested after being stopped with several weapons in the car of him. In the end he had to sell the house at half. Known as Á «Big Zá», Zydrunas Ilgauskas was adored by Cleveland fans. Although he didn't like Hakeem Olajuwon, he was still an important player in the field. He was part of two All-Star teams and was an all-rookie selection. He could also see the number of him withdrawn from the Valleier's deductible. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison / Wikipedia after his career, he and his wife adopted two Orphan brothers, too Lithuani. He became a volunteer trainer assistant for an important high school and in 2018 he received a career award from the city of Cleveland. Darko Milicic was chosen against Carmelo Anthony, Dwyane Wade and Chris Bosh in the NBA draft. Unfortunately for the city of Detroit, Darko has never managed to score more than 8.8 points per game in a single season (the career average of him was 6.0 ppg). Photo Courtesy: @ OnagicDaily / Wikipedia after the failure of his career NBA, he had a short career as a kickboxer. He then returned to Serbia and now he has a 125 acres farm of it sells cherries and apples to countries around the world. Even if he didn't earn his profits with the shooting baskets, shooting, Looks like he's made a good life. While he was only six feet tall, "Mighty Mouse" Damon Stoudamire was a fierce opponent on the field. He played for Toronto for the first three years of his career, averaging 19.7 PPG. Then he played for Portland, and his performance started to get worse. Photo Courtesy: The Sporting News/Getty Images
After retirement, Stoudamire wasn't finished with the world of basketball. He threw himself headlong into his career as a coach. He first coached in Rice and then served as assistant coach for the University of Memphis, Arizona and the Memphis Grizzlies. He is currently head coach at Pacific University and has an overall record of 39-58. Of the Vancouver Grizzlies franchise, Bryant Reeves was the team's most important face. Even though he was a bigger guy, he had amazing skills in handling balls. He was never an elite player in the NBA, but was loved by both teams in Memphis and Vancouver. Photo Courtesy: @SLAMonline/Twitter
After the NBA, she moves to a small Oklahoma town called Stillwater. It has a 300-acre cattle ranch, and you'll probably see it in town if you ever visit it. He has three children, and one of them, Trey, is an old striker on the Oklahoma State basketball team. Jerry Stackhouse, a bigger guy, was surprisingly good with his steps. He scored 29.8 PPG for the Detroit Pistons during the 2000-01 season. After he retired from the game he did a period as a commentator. Photo Courtesy: bmnendez08 /Wikipedia
All this until he got a job with the Toronto Raptors as assistant coach and then head coach for the Raptor G-League team. He then spent some time as an assistant to the Memphis Grizzlies before becoming Vanderbilt coach in April 2019. Stephon Marbury, aka "Starbury", was a legend even before he attended Georgia Tech. He averaged 19.3 PPG during his career, but was distracted by off-pitch problems. Since her NBA career, she has spent the last nine years in China, where she is a beloved celebrity. Photo Courtesy: Keith Allison /Wikipedia
A statue was built for him, it was put on a stamp and it was also a musical about his life. He currently resides officially in the country and currently works for the Royal Fighters in Beijing as a coach. Robert Swift joined the Seattle SuperSonics when he was selected 12th place overall in high school, but failed to make a big impact on the game during his four-year NBA career. This is mainly due to drug addiction, and he also served a month in prison as a result. Photo courtesy: User:STB-1/Wikipedia
Since then, he has eradicated his bad habits and signed with a Spanish basketball team. He also got engaged, so at least this guy had a happy ending. Not everyone is so lucky. Francis was an incredible athlete. Very few could check it on the field, since he was a fast and explosive player. He has played for seven years, he made three all-star appearances and even even Rookie of the Year. Photo courtesy: Lisa Blumenfeld / Getty Images
It could have been a hall of fame gambler, but life has come. He was struck with severe depression when his stepfather died, and the habit of alcohol abuse is soon followed. He was also arrested several times for various crimes. Brandon Roy did a lot for the Portland Trail Blazer in his first, and some people in the area still remember his contributions to the sport. It was an important part of how his team became relevant again in the League. Photo courtesy: Keith Allison / Wikipedia
However, Roy has been plagued by a lot of health problems. He was in and out of the game for years. At some point, he should have come back full force, but he never did. However, he is remembered as a great player and now coaches a high school basketball team. team.
